

CONSUL JR., THE MAN-MONKEY

Consul, Jr., the Man-Monkey, who opens a week's engagement at the Bungalow at Today's Matinee.

CONSUL, JR., the educated chimpanzee, who opens a week's engagement today at the Bungalow theatre, would certainly seem to be the last word in the way of an almost human specimen. Consul's owners do not claim that he is the missing link, being a truthful set of men, but he comes nearer being human without crossing the line, than does the average New York chappie. A Herald-Republican reporter yesterday had the pleasure of an interview yesterday with Consul, Jr., in his room at his hotel. Be it known that Consul Jr. does not sleep in a stable. His tastes are not that way. Even if they were, his owners would not permit it. Consul Jr. is worth man thousands of dollars, too many to risk in a stable where there are draughts that might give him enough pneumonia to kill him.

And there are reasons why Consul Jr. should occupy a room in a hotel, just like a man. For, like a man, Consul Jr. wears clothes, and better clothes than many men, and he certainly has more of them than many human bipeds, for he has twenty-three suits, and they all fit him. He takes a bath every morning, without any help, and when he goes to bed he doffs his clothes and dons his pajamas.

As a matter of fact, Consul Jr. did everything yesterday but talk, and he did not go through any of the stunts which he uses on the stage. His trainer says that today on the stage of the Bungalow he will walk erect, wearing a full dress suit and hat, he will sit at the table and eat with a knife and fork, he will drink wine and smoke cigarettes, he will walk up and down a flight of stairs, walking erect, he will change from his full dress suit to his evening dress, he will give an exhibition on roller skates, and he will take off his clothes and go to bed.

Consul's trainer took him out walking yesterday, dressed in his best, and he attracted a great deal of attention. That he is the best trained and nearest human animal ever exhibited in Salt Lake there can be little question.

CHICAGO MAN CHOSEN.

Benjamin S. Cable to Be Assistant Secretary of Commerce and Labor.

Washington, Nov. 24.—After an interview with President Taft today, Senator Cullom of Illinois announced that Benjamin S. Cable, an attorney of Chicago, would be appointed assistant secretary of commerce and labor to succeed Ormsby McHarg, whose resignation has been pending for more than two months.

Benjamin S. Cable is 37 years old, and was for years employed by the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific railroad. His father was one of the organizers of that system, and the son is a nephew of former Democratic National Committeeman Ben Cable. Mr. Cable is a graduate of Yale. He is unmarried and lives in Chicago. He ceased active connection with the management of the Rock Island when that road became a part of the larger system as now developed.

Secretary Nagel has known Mr. Cable personally for a dozen years. Mr. Cable

EXPOSED TO GREAT RISK

"lost us the United States of America, and we are not likely to offend against it again."

Lord Rosebery contended that the budget taxed the lords freely and abundantly, without their having a word to say in the matter. After referring to the budget as having spread over the country want of confidence and want of credit, the worst diseases which could affect commercial nations, he uttered a solemn warning that the pressure of great armaments was hurrying Europe toward bankruptcy.

Expressing regret that he could not support the resolution, Lord Rosebery resumed his seat, having spoken for fifty minutes. His picturesque and glowing eloquence produced a tremendous effect, leaving his hearers somewhat bewildered.

There was an immediate exodus of peers to discuss the situation in the lobbies, and although the debate continued until midnight, the rest of the speeches took rather the form of an anti-climax.

Lord Milner's Speech.

Lord Milner spoke of the abnormal manner in which the budget was drafted, and of the effect it would have on the country. He declared that all proposed new taxes were bad and unnecessary. All the money required, he contended, might have been raised by import duties, not only without injury to business and employment, but with actual benefit to both.

Lord Curzon will resume the debate tomorrow. It is impossible tonight to judge the effect Rosebery's warning may have. It is known already that a large section of the unionist peers have held grave doubts as to the expediency of Lord Lansdowne's course, and there is almost certain to be a large number of absentees when the resolution comes to a vote.

The prolongation of the debate in the house of lords into next week is due to the fact that there is no machinery to bring a discussion in this chamber to a close, all the peers expressing a desire to speak having a full right to do so. It was announced tonight that the house of commons will adjourn tomorrow until December 1, when Mr. Asquith, prime minister, will make an important statement explaining the policy of the government in view of the rejection of the budget, which is anticipated. Nothing has been learned as to what the ministers decided at today's council beyond the decision to call a party meeting.

ALASKA COAL LAND INQUIRY STILL ON

Witness for the Claimants Explains His Connection With Cunningham Crowd.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 24.—For the first time since the hearing opened, the relations of the so-called Guggenheim interests to the Cunningham claimants was taken up by the attorneys for the claimants in the inquiry into the Alaska coal land cases today. Attorneys for both sides held a conference this morning and decided to go ahead with the case here without waiting for transfer to Spokane, taking the testimony of witnesses who live in Seattle.

Charles J. Smith, the Seattle banker, who built the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition, and who is one of the claimants interested in the Cunningham group, was put on the stand by the defense at the opening of the afternoon session. Mr. Smith, who has had several years' experience in operating coal properties in the Cascades, was interested in the Alaska claims by Mr. Cunningham, who was authorized by him to file on a claim in the Katalia district.

Mr. Smith said there never had been any intention of holding the claims for some outside corporation. He said that he knew that it would be impossible for one man or three men working together to successfully operate a mine in the Katalia district, owing to the isolation of the properties and the great expenditure that would be required to get the coal to tidewater. He said that it was his understanding that they would join for the purpose of carrying on only that work which could not be successfully carried out by the claimants acting separately. Mr. Smith said he had paid $2,000 as his share of the expenses of making the filings and carrying on the prospecting work. In July, 1907, Mr. Cunningham informed him that the so-called Guggenheim interests proposed to build a railroad from the mines to tidewater at Cordova, Alaska. Later Cunningham informed him that a committee had been appointed at the Spokane meeting to take up the matter with a representative of the Guggenheim interests. As a result of the efforts of this committee, an agreement was drawn up which provided that the Guggenheims would build a line from the mines to tidewater. In return for which they were to handle the output of the mines. Mr. Smith said that he was not a party to this agreement, which subsequently fell through. Later some of the claimants formed a chartered company to build their own railroad. Smith then told of a little tit he had with L. R. Glavis, at that time a special agent for the government. Cunningham brought Glavis into Smith's office after the claims had been held up. Cunningham said that Glavis wanted them to sign an affidavit setting forth that they had no intention of holding the coal claims for the Guggenheims. "I talked a little short," said Smith on the stand, "and I told Glavis that I had made all the affidavits I was going to make. I said that I was willing to let the matter rest on the statements that I had already made, but when Glavis explained that he wanted this affidavit to clear up a belief prevalent in the land office that we were working for the Guggenheims, I consented."

It is probable that the government attorneys will take Smith in hand the first thing Friday morning.

PRESERVATION OF THE ALASKA SEAL

Fisheries Commission Plans to Include All Mammals of the Sea.

Washington, Nov. 24.—The recommendation for an international conference with a view to regulating the killing of not only seals but whales and all other animals of the sea, along with other recommendations adopted at a conference of the fisheries commission yesterday, was laid before Secretary of Commerce and Labor Nagel today by President David Starr Jordan of Leland Stanford university, and Commissioner of Fisheries Bowers.

The whole question so far as the pelagic sealing in the Bering off islands of the Bering sea is concerned, hinges on whether the killing of seals shall continue. By data before the conference shows the grave element of danger is the necessity of the female of the seals going so far out to sea in search for food that they cross the international boundary line.

The elimination of the male seals, except as to a very small percentage of them, does not figure. There have been many cases of poaching with consequent fines and seizures, but it is proposed to take up the whole question of regulation of the seal industry to avoid a possible early extinction of the seals.

The committee recommended an agreement by which the United States, Great Britain, Russia and Japan will cease pelagic sealing in Alaskan waters upon some satisfactory terms to be determined by these nations.

It also recommended a world-wide agreement by which all nations will

RECIPE FOR CATARRH

The only logical treatment for catarrh is through the blood. A prescription, which has recently proved wonderfully effective in hospital work, is the following. Any druggist has the ingredients or will quickly get them for you. Any one can mix them.

"One ounce compound syrup of Sarsaparilla; one ounce Toris compound; half pint Flowers, part lot 2, block 2, Belmont subdivision. These to be mixed by shaking well in a bottle, and used in tablespoon doses before each meal and at bedtime. This cured many people here last winter."

adopt regulations for the preservation of mammals of the sea, wherever found. Canada, it is claimed, is as much interested in the whale fisheries of the Atlantic coast as is the United States in the fur seal industry, once yielding an annual catch of from two to four millions of seals, but now reduced to one-thirtieth of that amount.

Every nation, it is stated, is deeply concerned in some of the mammals of the sea, so that the advisory committee hopes an international agreement can be reached for the benefit of all of them.
